Kurry's story is deeply intertwined with the rugged landscapes and enduring spirit of Montana. Born in Butte and raised on her family's cattle ranch near Whitehall in the scenic Pipestone Valley, Kurry developed a profound connection to the Montana way of life. Her summers were a balance of hard work and cherished moments—moving cattle to the summer range, tending hay fields, and learning firsthand the value of dedication and perseverance, all while enjoying the simple joys of lakeside days, local events, and the beauty of the surrounding wilderness. A graduate of Whitehall High School, Kurry's roots in her community run deep. She is now a devoted wife and mother to two sons and four daughters, carrying forward the traditions of family, resilience, and connection to the land that define Montana's spirit. Since 2014, Kurry has been serving the communities of Butte and southwest Montana as a trusted real estate professional, helping clients achieve their dreams with integrity, passion, and personalized service. Outside of work, she enjoys camping under Montana's starry skies, boating on its pristine waters, and embarking on outdoor adventures with her family. For Kurry, life is a journey filled with family, experiences, and the endless pursuit of adventure in the Treasure State.
